

PHI 210 : BUSINESS ETHICS

This course covers many of the ethical and legal issues facing business people today. Particular attention is given to the following topics: the relationship between the traditional property and profit concerns of business and one's ethical rights and responsibilities; the relationship between ethics, business, and law; and the social purpose and justification of business, if any. Readings will look at traditional debates and current issues and will feature a variety of contemporary case studies.

3.000

Philosophy

GEP, Major, Minor, Elective credit.