

ECN 345: AMERICAN ECONOMIC HISTORY

This course studies the economic development of the United States from the colonial period to the present. The interrelated changes in economic performance, technology, institutions, and governmental policy are emphasized. Such topics as early development, transportation, population growth, technological change, financial development, and the role of government are covered.

Credits: 3

Prerequisites:

ECN 201

ECN 202

or permission of instructor.

Program: Economics