

ENG 205: INTRODUCTORY TOPICS IN COMPARATIVE LITERATURE

SP20 topic: Literature & Translation

A focused study on a particular time period, genre, geographical area, cultural milieu, or theme within the framework of comparative literary studies. Topics in this course typically cross national boundaries and perhaps even traditional structures of periodization.

The course emphasizes works originating from outside of Europe or originally written in languages other than English. These works are taught in English translation with attention to the original culture that produced them. English majors may not take more than one such course to count toward major requirements. Non-European and non-Anglophone GEP requirement.
